FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

IPRO honours Deloitte Australia

Award given out at IPRO Innovations 2009 Conference

IPRO Tech, a leader in the design of scalable, easy to manage litigation support software as well as e-Discovery software, honoured Deloitte Australia at its two-day eighth Annual Partner Conference, IPRO Innovations 2009. Deloitte Forensic, based in Australia, received recognition for International Market Leadership and Innovation.

The conference, held at the Pointe Hilton Squaw Peak in Phoenix, Arizona featured more than 20 specialized workshops and seminars to provide more than 200 attendees with important hands-on knowledge and comfort in the quickly evolving world of litigation support software.

Deloitte Australia is part of Deloitte Touche Tohmatsu, one of the world's leading professional services organizations. Deloitte Forensic offers the largest ediscovery capability in the Asia Pacific region, and has an extensive portfolio of forensic and ediscovery experience. Over the past 12 to 18 months, the Australian practice has invested significantly in consolidating a platform based on the latest technology, specialist software and personnel. Globally, Deloitte Australia is part of a $27.4 billion global network of associated firms operating in nearly 140 countries, with 165,000 people.

The criteria for selection by IPRO includes consistent dedication to technological innovations and leading edge business paradigms to streamline business practices, achieving top quality service levels, and positively impacting the litigation community in their market over the last year.

According to Jim King, CEO of IPRO, the annual conference brings together the most innovative and effective entrepreneurs in the industry. "Deloitte Australia has set itself apart with its commitment to excellence, and its unflinching dedication to customer service," he said. "IPRO is proud to be a partner with a globally recognized company such as Deloitte Australia."
