

Consumer Direct

Winning the hearts and minds of today's digital consumer

THE SHIFTING LANDSCAPE

Next generation, digitally-obsessed consumers are disrupting the traditional buying process. They expect personalized shopping experiences, tailored choices, immediate feedback, transparent interactions, and a closer connection with the brands they support. They also follow new paths to purchase—lots of online research, personal recommendations, price comparisons, and reading customer reviews—across all of their devices, whenever and wherever they choose to consume information. Then once these consumers decide to make a purchase, many prefer to make the purchase immediately online versus taking a trip to the store.

For consumer products companies, these new buying trends present new challenges. For one, their customers now have more power—they lead the purchase journey with an ability to directly impact brand perception among their peers, and promote the companies with those personalized, experience-driven interactions they desire.

This means companies should consider thinking more like their consumers and offer:

- Connected, omni-channel experiences
- Data integrated across channels
- Multiple delivery models
- Self-service options

CAPTURE THE DIGITAL CUSTOMER

Many consumer products companies are struggling with their digital marketing efforts for three main reasons:

- 1. Missed moments – sending messages at the wrong time
- 2. Inauthentic messaging – sending the wrong message
- 3. Failing to engage – sending a message through the wrong channels

In a digital-first world, you need to be fast, granular, and connected with your customers throughout their lifecycle. You can do this by building capabilities that support:

- Adopting a new media model reflective of always-on content publishing, immersive social media, and integrated media
- Personalizing and deploying marketing messages wherever consumers will see them
- Creating an effective experience across multiple channels and touchpoints to help drive conversion and loyalty
- Drawing on big data and analytics for insight into who to target and how to optimize content, tactics, and spend.

The question is where to start. That's where Deloitte Digital comes in.
