

Deloitte Legal Scandinavian Desk

Providing tailored legal services to cross-country expanding Scandinavian and German companies

The Scandinavian countries are interesting and emerging economic partners due to their low national debts, high political stability, and strongly export-oriented economies. Information Technology is a significant driver of this development, but other industry sectors and natural resources also figure as economic factors in these countries to the north of Germany. Likewise, Germany's real estate market is interesting to Scandinavian investors. These close economic relationships between the Scandinavian countries and Germany make competent legal advice essential to enable cooperation and economic engagement in both directions.

Good knowledge of the similarities between the countries' legal systems and corporate cultures are necessary for negotiating, drafting contracts, and preparing cross-border restructures; but above all, understanding the differences is key. ➤

The Deloitte Legal Scandinavian Desk therefore brings together advisors with extensive experience and contacts in all the Scandinavian countries, who are available to answer any questions you may have in this regard. The Scandinavian Desk offers you advice in all areas of law and at all seven of our offices in Germany.
