

Cross-border reliance intensifies the need for supply chain visibility and reshoring options

COVID-19 had shown that life sciences companies need to re-evaluate the resiliency of their supply chains

Developments in supply chain during COVID-19:

- Manufacturing vaccines at-risk
- Competitors partner to expedite production and distribution of vaccines
- Non-traditional players (auto, consumer) stepped up to manufacture health care products

Innovative science driving the need for new manufacturing capabilities

Who responded the best during the first wave of the pandemic? The answer is simple: the companies that had invested the most in supply chain processes and capabilities before the crisis.
