MAKING AN IMPACT THAT MATTERS
since 1845

In today's complex business environment, the companies' effort in managing litigations and complex business disputes has become increasingly challenging. Access to the accounting and other records of a company could be one of the most crucial factors in navigating a business dispute. This provides directors with the opportunity to gather, understand, inspect and draw conclusions on the relevant transactions and balances being disputed.

Internal and external legal counsels play a critical role, but other specialists are also needed to support litigations and disputes. It is common for companies to engage experienced accounting and financial professionals to provide valuable insights and clarity related to accounting and finance with respect to the disputes.

With reference to Section 245(8) of Companies Act 2016, "The Court may, in any particular case, order that the accounting and other records of a company be open to inspection by an approved company auditor acting for a director, subject to a written undertaking given to the Court that information acquired by the auditor during his inspection shall not be disclosed by him except to that director."
