2025 EMEA Technology Fast 500

Ambition at scale

May 2026

About the Deloitte EMEA Fast 500

Ambition at scale in the technology ecosystem

- Over the past year, the EMEA technology ecosystem has entered a phase of recalibration and maturity. Following several years of accelerated growth and expansion, startups and scaleups have increasingly shifted their focus from rapid experimentation to scalable business models, operational efficiency and long-term value creation.
- Rather than signalling a slowdown in ambition, this transition reflects a more grounded and strategic approach to growth. Companies are prioritising fundamentals: product-market fit, unit economics, repeatable revenue streams and disciplined capital allocation. As a result, growth at scale has become more selective, but also more sustainable.
- The 2025 Fast 500 cohort demonstrates that ambition today is less about speed alone, and more about the ability to scale responsibly across markets, sectors and customer segments.

Selection and qualifying criteria

- This ranking is compiled from applications to the Deloitte Technology Fast 50 programmes across EMEA. Find out more about the EMEA Fast 50 programmes.
- Winners are determined based on percentage of revenue growth rate.

From growth to scale: key ecosystem dynamics

A more execution-driven mindset

- High-growth technology companies across EMEA are increasingly defined by their execution capabilities. Ambition is now paired with a clear focus on delivery: converting innovation into commercial outcomes, embedding technology into mission-critical processes, and demonstrating measurable value for customers.
- This shift is particularly visible among scaleups that have moved beyond domestic markets and are expanding across borders, adapting their products, operations and go-to-market strategies to different regulatory, cultural and industrial contexts.

Software as the foundation of scale

- Software continues to act as the backbone of scalable growth across the region. The dominance of software-driven business models within the Fast 500 reflects their ability to combine flexibility, repeatability and capital efficiency with rapid geographic expansion.
- Across sectors, technology companies are leveraging software to automate workflows, optimise decision-making and enable data-driven operations. This not only supports faster growth but also allows organisations to scale without a linear increase in costs, a critical factor in the current phase of the ecosystem.

Focus on real-world impact and application

- Another defining feature of the past year has been a stronger emphasis on concrete application and measurable outcomes. Whether in financial services, healthcare, environmental technology or enterprise solutions, growth is increasingly driven by technologies that solve tangible problems and integrate directly into existing value chains.
- Ambition at scale, in this context, means building solutions that are robust, reliable and ready for widespread adoption, not just innovative, but industrialised.

By the numbers

The 2025 edition reveals a noticeable shift in the geographic distribution of high-growth companies across EMEA when compared to the previous year. While established hubs such as the UK, Nordics and Western Europe continue to dominate the ranking in absolute terms, the updated data shows a clear strengthening of Central and Eastern European markets, with countries such as the Czech Republic, Slovakia and Croatia significantly increasing their representation. At the same time, markets like Portugal maintain a strong and consistent presence, reinforcing their position as mature contributors within the region's scale-up ecosystem.

This evolution suggests a broadening of the region's scale-up landscape, where growth is becoming less concentrated in a handful of mature ecosystems and more distributed across a wider set of emerging markets. In practice, this reflects both the deepening of local innovation pipelines and the increasing ability of companies in these geographies to scale beyond domestic boundaries and compete at EMEA level.

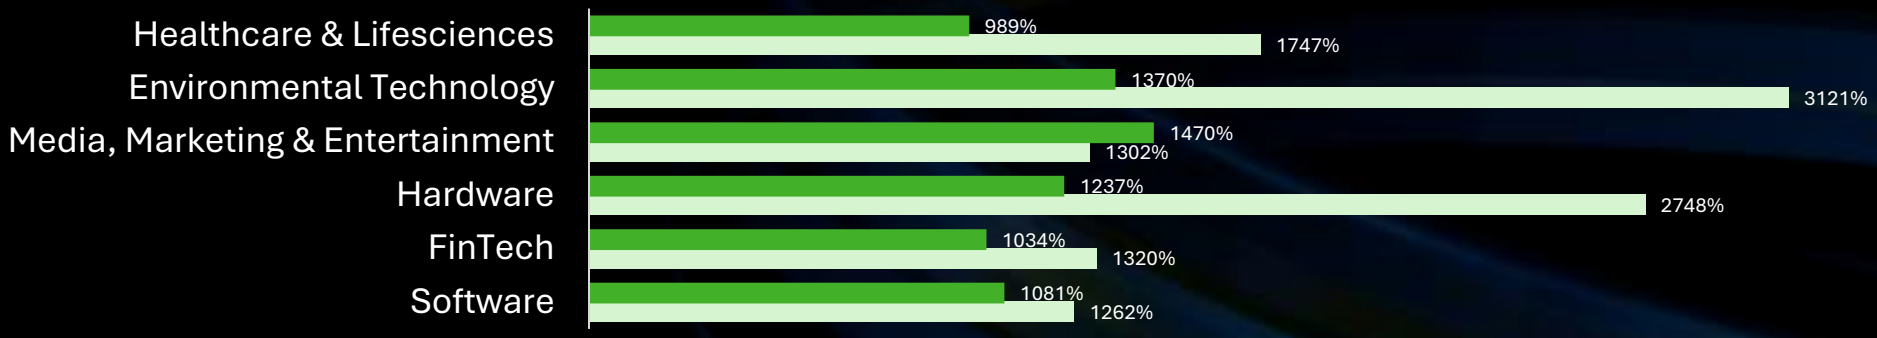
Average growth rates by sector



The 2025 sector distribution remains broadly consistent with the previous edition, with software continuing to dominate in terms of number of companies, followed by FinTech and a balanced presence across other sectors. However, growth intensity continues to vary significantly, with Marketing, Media & Entertainment and Environmental Technology leading in average growth, while Software and FinTech show more moderate but consistent performance.
This contrast highlights a more mature ecosystem, where scale is driven both by volume in established sectors and by higher growth intensity in more dynamic business models.

Meet the winner

Stunlock Studios AB

The 2025 EMEA Technology Fast 500 is led by Stunlock Studios AB, a Sweden-based video game developer founded in 2010. Headquartered in Skövde, Stunlock Studios is best known for creating highly scalable, community-driven online games, including Battlerite and
V Rising, which have reached global audiences across multiple platforms. The company's top ranking this year reflects its ability to combine creative excellence with sustained commercial growth, translating strong intellectual property into scalable digital products with international reach.

It's incredibly exciting that our company stands out among so many impressive tech companies. We develop games over longer periods, then generate significant revenue during intense launch phases. V Rising, with over 150,000 concurrent players and weeks as a global top seller on Steam, has had an enormous impact. It's very enjoyable to represent our industry at this level.
