Tamar Guttman

Founder, New Amsterdam Jazz
Board member, Creative Capital
Impact producer

Tamar Guttman is an entrepreneur, impact producer, and advisor from Amsterdam. She is passionate about the intersection of arts and social impact and aims to amplify voices and stories that need to be heard, primarily through film and music.

Tamar is the co-founder and Director of the non-profit New Amsterdam Jazz, which supports the music scene based in the Netherlands and connects it to scenes around the globe. She serves as Head of Partnerships and Engagement of Think-Film Impact Production, an Oscar-winning impact media company that blends art with action for measurable social change.

Tamar sits on the Board of Directors of Creative Capital, one of the leading grantmaking institutions in the United States, and serves on the Advisory Board to Amarte, a leading arts foundation that provides grants to innovative artists in the Netherlands. She is the Netherlands Country Ambassador for NEXUS Global and leads the Arts Working Group for Toniic, the global action community for impact investing. Tamar previously led the Coalition for Impact, a unique collaborative network between 6 of the leading social impact investing networks. In her free time, Tamar can be found in a jazz club or learning a new language in a nearby cafe.
