88% of wealth managers (up from 78 percent in 2016) believe art and collectibles should be part of a wealth management offering

What has been an assumption and a "test" in the beginning, has now been widely recognized – Art & wealth management is now part of a long term trend

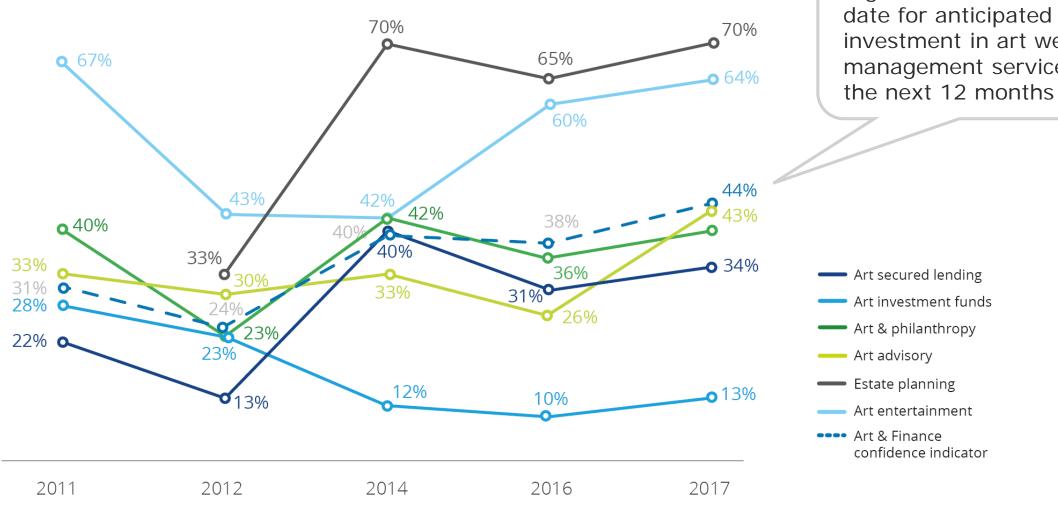

| Sample            | 2011 | 2012 | 2014 | 2015 | 2017             |
|-------------------|------|------|------|------|------------------|

| Art collectors    | 48   | 81   | 90   | 94   | 107              |
| Art professionals | 140  | 112  | 122  | 126  | 155              |

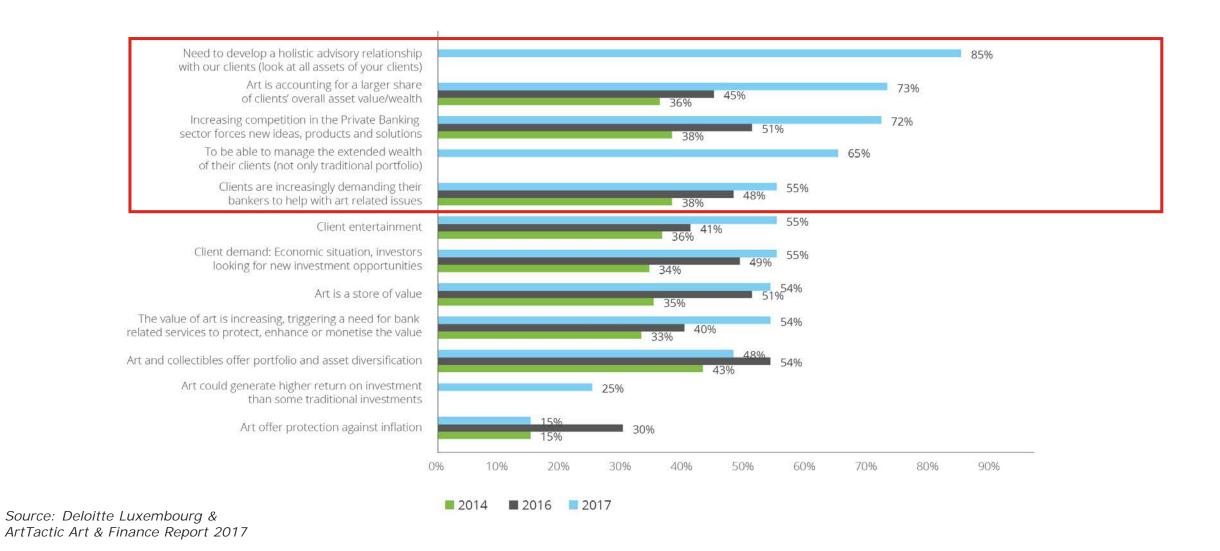

Wealth Managers: Which services will you focus on in the next 12 months?

Wealth managers are taking a more proactive approach

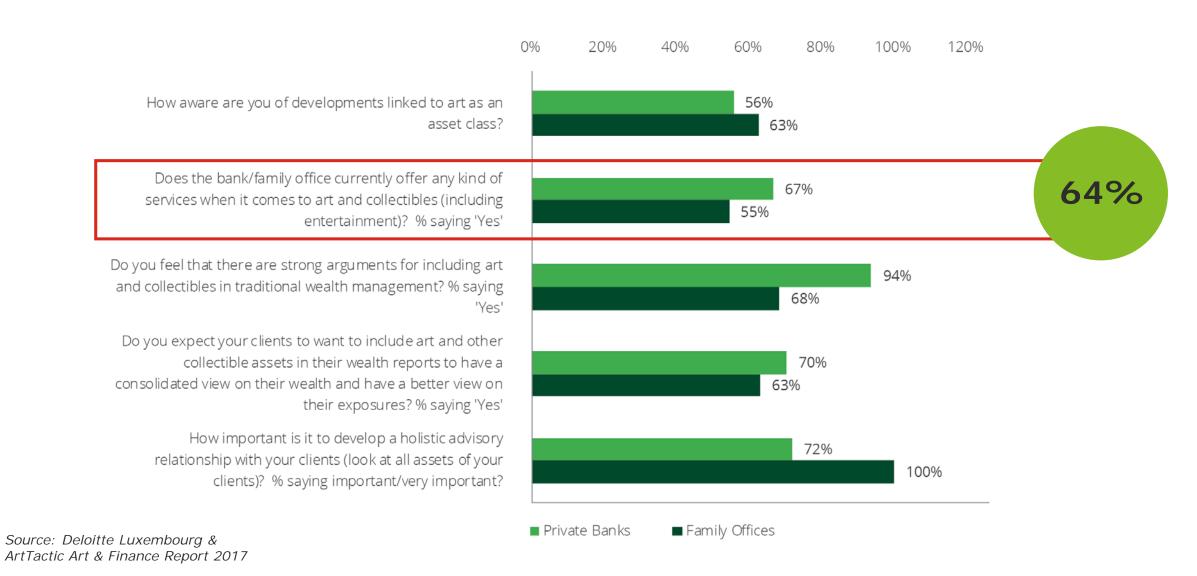

Highest overall reading to date for anticipated investment in art wealth management services over

Main motivations to integrate Art and collectibles in a wealth management offering Competition – need of a holistic advisory relationship – Client demand

Current wealth management offering 64% wealth managers offer art-related services to their clients

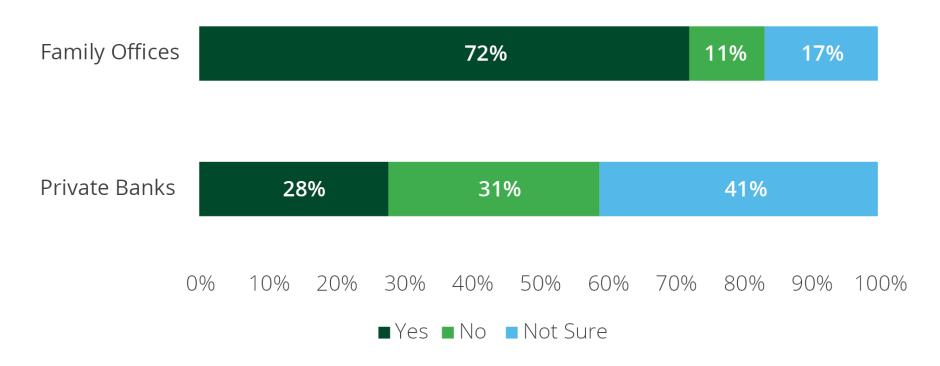

GAP Analysis: Most relevant art and wealth management services vs. wealth management offering Collectors see their wealth managers as their trusted independent advisers

Estate planning is viewed as the most important art and wealth management service by wealth managers, art professionals, and collectors

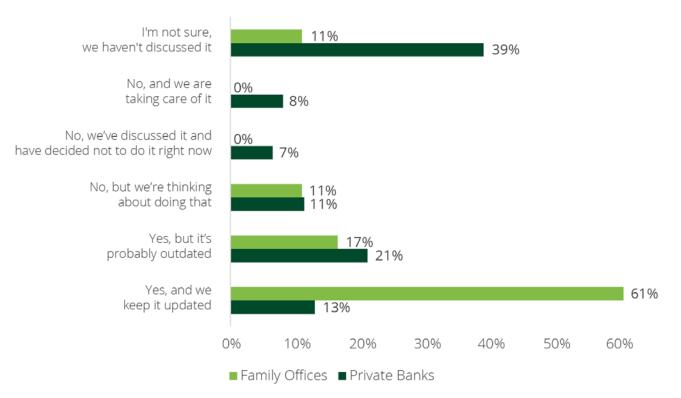

28% of private banks said that their clients had sufficiently addressed their art collection in the estate plans versus 72% of the family offices surveyed.

When it comes to collection management and estate planning, family offices seem to have their house in order

61% of family offices said they maintain an updated inventory of their clients art collection, compared to only 13% of private banks

Figure 26. Wealth managers: Do my clients maintain an inventory of their collection that at a Minimum identifies each piece, its present location and its approximate values o that we could Help to administer the estate without the art collector's input?

Where your art will go?

Art-related wealth be included in wealth reporting to move from a more reactive towards a more proactive approach

69 percent of the wealth managers (down from 73% percent in 2016) said their clients wanted to include art and other collectible assets in their wealth reports in order to have a consolidated view of their wealth

Challenges for Wealth Managers in terms of imbedding art and collectibles in traditional wealth management

The ranking of the most important challenges remains largely the same as that reported in the first survey in 2011

However, as interest in art and wealth management grows, an apparent lack of senior management support for developing these initiatives seems to be creating a greater sense of frustration among the wealth managers surveyed this year

Emotions vs. investment

The emotional and social aspects of collecting art combined with the potential for increasing or safeguarding value that seem to be the driving motivation

Figure 34. Why do your clients buy art? (art professionals) Figure 35. Why do your buy art? (art collectors) 2017 32% 2016 17% a. investment purpose 2016 22% ■ b. collecting purpose c. collecting purpose but with an investment 2014 10% 2014 2012 23% 77% 2012 40% 20% 40% 60% 80% 100%

Wealth managers need to integrate those motivations when they design their art and wealth management products to bring passion into wealth management

Art-Secured Lending

The US art-secured lending market is expanding at 13% from 2015

In this year's survey, 67 percent of wealth managers said their institution now offered art-secured lending services

Challenges & need for risk management Valuation – lack of liquidity – regulation – risk assessment
