What am I supposed to talk about with alumni?

This is the fun part. Whether you do it in person, by phone, or online, there are so many great excuses to reconnect with an alumnus. But don't send an email blast – that's not the goal. The key is to make your alumni connections personal and meaningful as you build long-term relationships.

Here are some suggested topics of discussion:

Openers

- It's been a while since we last spoke, but I wanted to check in and see how you were.
- It was great running into you the other day. Let's stay in touch.
- Coffee time? Let's take a virtual coffee in a chat.

Career progress

- How are you enjoying your new job?
- What have you learned about the industry you're working in?
- Is there anything that we at Deloitte can do to add value to your career or your alumni experience?
- Can we help you further your personal growth or career aspirations?

Business-specific topics

- I'm interested in how your company is doing in this economy — provided you can share information. What priorities are you focused on?
- What are some of the pressing business needs that you might be able to share with me? We at Deloitte are adapting our services to new business needs.

Alumni needs

- We have over 200,000 alumni in our database, but it's hard to keep people's information up to date. Can I confirm that we've got your current title, company, and email address?
- If you're not in our alumni database, please sign up! It's a great way for us to keep you updated on alumni events and communications. Send us an email
- Are you connected to our social media channels? We're also on Facebook, LinkedIn, Instagram and Youtube.
- We'd appreciate your input into how we might add value to your post-Deloitte experience. Are we meeting your needs as an alum? What can we do better in the future? (If you receive feedback, please let the Alumni Team know)

Most of all, have fun reconnecting with alumni. Talking to your former colleagues may bring you unexpected insights, and you'll likely add value to their alumni experience as well.
