SITUATION

A large pharmaceutical client headquartered in Japan and spanning around 70 countries was looking to transform. Its priority was making the most of its people, processes and technology to create efficiencies in the business, but the challenge was bringing together its procurement and legal functions.

RELATIONSHIP AND SOLUTION

Over 18 months, we used our global Centres of Excellence in the US, Poland and India, together with our skills in contracting and contract management, to help create a more efficient organisation.

We took a close look at how to develop more effective shared services to assist the client's ultimate goal of outsourcing the new function globally.

During the project we redesigned processes and put systems in place to help manage resources. We also made contracts simpler and easier to use and brought together their procurement and legal functions. The transformation achieved the client's vision of globalising efficiency across its business.

SITUATION

We are working with a global telecommunications company that is transforming its support services as part of a major reorganisation. This involves putting in place new contract service schedules – there are currently around 370 of these that define services, terms and prices offered to the client's 30 business entities.

*based on stakeholders' assessment and feedback

RELATIONSHIP AND SOLUTION

This deal is Deloitte Legal's strategy and vision in action as it brings together all of our Contracts disciplines – legal advisory, transform and operate. Our purpose built team recommended using Generative AI to accelerate the production of these schedules, saving time and money.

We brought in subject matter experts across legal, commercial contracts and the AI technology space and we worked closely with the company's AI tech team to guide them in how they need to set up the technology

Our team maintained oversight of the production line, quality reviews and lessons learned

This was the first time that GenAI had been proposed to the client and substantial cost and time savings were made possible by our willingness to think creatively about the client's challenges. Our insights on the future of contracting were also fundamental to the decision to adopt this new approach.

SITUATION

A global recruitment and placement company had an outdated contracting process, which was a blocker to their growing business. They wanted to modernise and integrate Contract Life Cycle Management (CLM) technology so needed a new, business-friendly set of contract templates.

RELATIONSHIP AND SOLUTION

Our multi-disciplinary team designed a set of consistent templates that maintained legal enforceability yet balanced usability with the client's preferred risk profile.

The templates had to be easy to use and locally compliant, while still being scalable across other jurisdictions. They needed to be accompanied by practical playbooks, approval processes and drafting notes, and be future-proofed for easy integration into a yet-to-be-determined Contract Lifecycle Management solution.

The company wanted to improve service delivery through more streamlined contracting, manage highly skilled resources more effectively and prepare for a transition to a third-party contract legal management service, supported by CLM technology.

RELATIONSHIP AND SOLUTION

Our approach was a combination of planning, design and implementation of both managed services and contract management.

We enhanced the client's procurement processes, technologies and procedures, which increased control, scalability, quality and transparency. We supported this with comprehensive playbooks and technology upgrades.

We also set up a managed service team that supported our client's Legal department through review and negotiations for three initial contract types, sharing reports and metrics.
