Hourly pay

The firm’s compensation philosophy is pay for performance and merit based. The firm recognizes people’s unique strengths and contributions and reward the value they deliver, where those with differentiated performance receive differentiated rewards. The firm is committed to paying its people fairly, aligned to key competitors by paying for performance and the outcomes they achieve. This approach is supplemented by a pay equity program ensuring like-for-like pay inclusive of leadership checks and balances in the annual compensation processes.

The firm has a wide range of roles with different rates of pay, with pay ranges reviewed annually. Women currently have a higher representation within the lower pay quartiles, which results in average pay differences. As Deloitte works towards more equal representation at all levels, the gaps are expected to continue to close over time. The gender pay gap, not to be confused with the issue of equal pay, shows the difference in the average hourly rate of pay between women and men in an organization, expressed as a percentage of mean and median earnings.

	Mean hourly pay gap ¹	Median hourly pay gap ²
Men	$1.00	$1.00
Women	$0.88	$0.89

Women’s average hourly wages were 12% less than men’s. For every dollar men earn in average hourly wages, women earn 88 cents. Women’s median hourly wages were 11% less than men’s. For every dollar men earn in median hourly wages, women earn 89 cents.

Overtime pay

All permanent employees have a variable pay component that makes up their compensation. This is paid through either overtime pay or bonus pay. Among the British Columbia population, the number of women who worked overtime was higher than men. This reflects a higher representation of women in roles that include overtime compensation. However, men worked for a higher number of overtime hours, impacting the mean and median comparisons.

	Mean overtime pay ³	Median overtime pay ⁴
Men	$1.00	$1.00
Women	$0.69	$0.65
