

Mexico/Peru: Potential impact on immigration processing due to diplomatic tensions

Impact – High

Context:

As of 11 November 2025, neither the Mexican Ministry of the Interior nor the Ministry of Foreign Affairs has issued an official statement regarding the suspension of consular activities at the Mexican Embassy in Peru. However, the Mexican Consulate has been issuing local announcements indicating that consular services for foreign nationals are unavailable, with notices being published daily through their social network and only referring to the same date.

What has changed?

Recent developments in the diplomatic relationship between Mexico and Peru indicate heightened tension, creating uncertainty around the continuity of consular operations.

What does this change represent?

Although there is no formal suspension of services, the daily announcements restricting consular services suggest a risk of disruption for immigration processes involving Mexican consular services in Peru.

What are the implications of this change?

Significant delays or temporary suspension of services, impacting visa issuance, consular support, travel plans, and work authorizations.

Who should consider this change?

Companies and individuals relying on immigration processes through the Mexican Embassy in Peru should monitor the situation closely and prepare contingency plans for upcoming consular appointments until the matter is resolved.

When will it be implemented?

There is no confirmed implementation date, as no official changes have been announced. However, stakeholders should remain alert to possible developments.

Recommended actions:

- Monitor official communications from the Mexican Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the Embassy of Mexico in Peru.
- Consider contingency planning for immigration processes involving Mexican consular services in Peru within the following weeks/months.
- Reach out to your Deloitte immigration contact for guidance and support in case of any developments.

Deloitte will continue to monitor the situation and provide updates as new information becomes available.
